Generating local energy

Do you support green energy that benefits local communities?

To deal with the climate emergency we need to make our energy greener and use less of it. But it's easy to feel that our individual actions have limited impact and that energy companies don't have the needs of people and planet at heart.

That's where community energy comes in!

Community energy companies like Bath & West Community Energy (BWCE) are owned by local people and are set up to provide tangible benefit to local communities. Currently we generate renewable energy equivalent to the annual demand of 4,000 homes and have donated over £200,000 of surplus income to local community projects.

We can do so much more with your help.

Sign up to the BWCE Supporters Network.

Register as a BWCE Supporter today to show your enthusiasm for community energy and help us develop more green energy projects that benefit local communities.

Every sign up will go towards our initial target of recruiting 1000 supporters by October 2022.

You might just want to sign up to show your support and leave it at that. Or you might want to get more involved to help build the community energy movement locally.

Your level of involvement is up to you!

Together we can work towards decarbonising the energy system, whilst at the same time benefiting our local communities.
